Make facebook post about cuba and che

Make facebook post about 9/11

Make facebook post about jeshu being a jewish revolutionary and how Christianity today is Pauline

At the end of the day, there are people who would kick the homeless but would call the cops if they were to ever get kicked by a homeless person, hmn. I do not side with the homeless, if they are causing trouble or are in your way and you tell them to move then get them out of the way even if that means hurting them because you have to make society go, not them. It's fine by me if they ask me for money I have no issue with this. Just like with the prostitute lane in Germany, we are shutting this down, if a homeless person is blocking your car on purpose tell them to leave. If cops ever give me trouble, just don't talk at all they don't matter society doesn't need cops I've already proven this.

Maybe Islam was to push the Christians into Europe and launch the Crusades later. We don't know where the world was headed in 600 AD. Without Christianity, there are no WWI and WWII. Muhammad gave the world the Quran, saved the Kaaba, showed how the Prophets were Arabs, gave a united language, united Arabia, put a Mosque where the Third Temple will be, and created the Arab World. I've said it all along and I will say it again, God trusts Muslims to protect the Arab world including Mecca and Medina, they won't let it be attacked they will storm in but I have no reason to believe that the Zionists will make it that far ever. We Christians will probably play a role in this too because of wars in Europe and America; there is work to be done. Good things could happen, we could get Turkey back or we could get half of Turkey which is a start but it is all where it ends and that is not in my lifetime.

Muhammad even made sure to tell others "Say there is no God but Allah" which ends all Dualism debates because the Ten Commandments said "Put no Gods before me" when the people of Israel were confused and had made errors that the Pagans made worshipping those who are not God. Muhammad has to be telling the truth when he lived a humble life and he was told to read by Gabriel. Muhammad had his life saved by Gabriel, I believe it. Muhammad said "I don't know how to read" three times, that's how I would responded if I were 18; I would have said "my reading skills are poor Gabriel, I will struggle with more than three pages." Muhammad had read what Gabriel gave him, he woke up the next morning and it was as if he knew the Quran front and back. Arabia needed a leader and it got one. I admit when I read that it took 23 years to create the Quran that did seem suspicious to me. I can just picture the look in his eyes changing from being someone who wanted to do good to someone who would do good and could not be stopped, nobody could push him around. He even addressed doubters from all around the world by referring to them along the lines of "Pagans who walk in justice but are not allowed near the Kaaba." If you think claiming the Kaaba for People of the Book is unfair well hold on, don't you own property? Do you let me walk right in and sit on your couch? Just look at the amount of wars he had won and how many people are Muslim. If there were only 20 million Muslims only in Arabia I might not believe him but seeing how far Christianity has spread I almost have to without saying "uh". Muhammad is so relatable and the Quran is fantastic, it really liberates you from a society that is dependent on expensive cars. I don't even know where to begin. I was destined to meet that guy who was in the train from Iraq; I needed his support to push me through to find the right answers. It will take me months to accept this. I strongly believe that Jews, Christians, and Muslims are meant to pray different and the three ways are to separate us. I will purposely draw from the Apostles to better my Christianity but I will debate Muslims to help them restore their faith in their religion without giving them the sense that I believe Muhammad, I will have to say something like "I believe strongly in the New Testament, particularly Damascus falling, Muhammad is my friend not my enemy and I trust him that's what is important." God would want me to help these people out. Obviously there is material in the Hadith's that I disagree with because the New Testament explains it better for example drunkard verses the writers of the Hadith's not wanting you to drink alcohol at all by accident. I just don't think they got it because we all agree that it is sinning against your own body to drink, no one has drunk alcohol and learned while doing it, it is a waste of time but a fun one for many it's the same thing with gambling if you can avoid it then avoid it but if you love alcohol go right ahead, you are wrong to do so it's like when you fail a test in school and you admit it don't feel any shame at all. If you need alcohol to adjust, how could I say no when you will eventually get off of it? God isn't ever upset at you ever for drinking as long as you take care of your body. Here's more proof, you can wreck your brain drinking every night. My reasoning for not drinking differs from yours; I would like a steady one to two nights a week max later on in life, the less the better. No one has ever said "I should have drunk more in my youth." If the Ottomans were around today, they may have had to force some of the youth to cut back a bit by creating shortages of alcohol which is fine and I agree with.

They want one world government that would include one source of media, image the corruption and hidden data they would hide from you.

I'm not completely there yet with predestination because people I know in life can make a fortune and retire young and others could end up paying child support for three kids that is reality. I also don't know how free will plays into it but I do completely believe that God gave us all life for a purpose even if the purpose for some of us was just for salvation alone. Predestination could just mean that he knows who will be good and who will be evil; he knows how many humans there will be and when the world will end. The problem is that I wouldn't go up to someone and say that we were predetermined to meet each other, that isn't true because I have free will there will be some instances but they are few and far between, I mean think of all of the people who don't even bother to listen to what I have to say. If I tell a girl "you are lucky to be Islamic, this is a big deal for you, and God wants you to be honest with others" she has to believe it and not assume that I'm trying to use her. There could be some events once every ten years where you help someone get through a tough time, but it doesn't run your day to day life. Predestination is probably just fate; someone who works hard in life and is lucky will most likely be rich some day. Fate was not wrong if you didn't end out rich, fate just says "look you may or may not be rich some day." If you try in life and you want to help others, others will see it in you but sometimes people are too nice and get pushed around, they need to be told otherwise, you have to better grasp control of your fate in the real world remember you don't need an expensive sports car. Fate might only mean predestination but I extend that to the real world its fine if you don't agree with it in the real world. If this works like how I think it will than I will talk to others who believe saying "I am a servant of God who was sent to earth to help you out" but if the responses frustrate me or if people laugh than I will probably be quiet about it.

Think of all of the aspects you have to know- read, geography, populations, different perspectives, economics, religion, politics, previous alliances, most wars, history, leaders, nationalism, and heritage you also have to collect all of the data onto a flash drive. This is to get you to realize where we are at in the world. It's not that we stand out; it's that it requires so much knowledge then you have to figure out what side you support whether good or evil. Then we have to convince other people that what is happening overseas is not beneficial for America and we have no clue what to tell them because each person is different, some could think you are just ranting for attention, and some could even forget what message is unfortunately. This could take the average person 7 years to figure out, it took me 4. People don't have time for this.

Who do animals serve? That's easy, humans. Who do wild animals serve? Their instincts. The animal does not know any better that when I walk by it, I am not looking for a fight if an animal goes away than it is out of fear or instinct. I know animals have emotion too they can get scared. No animal or group of wild animals can be taught as a whole to have new boundaries with humans then what they already have, it will not be passed down from generations. It's my responsibility to know how far I can get to an animal without messing with them or else I'm being a jerk to it. Animals that are not domesticated always think they are right, you have to kick them and tell them to go away; they will listen. Animals don't want conflict, but you have to tell them when to leave. If one of them attacks you, you must attack them back. I can throw a small rock at it if it is bugging me but I cannot chase the animal. That's why I don't like a portion of dogs, they are so stupid even if you train them not to be but cats will train themselves. I am smarter than the animal so it will obey my command because I provide food to it. Domesticated animals that are treated and trained right will obey humans. Many animals aren't even smart enough to stay within the area I provide them with, that's why we give them shock collars. That's why we tell humans "you know better" not to shame them but to say hey maybe you overreacted without making the person feel bad about it. Animals such as dogs protect humans; they are God's animals so long as they are trained right.

Pagans made an error that the moon was God, other Pagans made the mistake that the Sun was the Moon vise versa. They just looked up and thought the Moon was their God. Some Jinn may have appeared their lifetimes and gave them images out of greed for that Jinn to be worshipped. I would be scared out of my mind if I Jinn were to talk to me, I would not trust the Jinn to be good or neutral. I can never claim they are a Jinn, the wrong person would give me a look and the Jinn can laugh at me. The Jinn should be able to know that I know they are a Jinn by the questions I am asking and the look I am giving. There are probably plenty of Jinns that want to do the right thing the Muslims told of one who fought on their side. I am sure there are Jinns who are hiding from within the enemy who will be responsible for helping the enemy feel so much shame because they want to do the right thing and confuse the enemy without them knowing. But I have no clue how many Jinn there are on earth, there could be 40 for all I know, I will just work under the notion that I will never meet one in my lifetime. I will still think (I know now) some of these people who hold office are Jinn's, I don't know which are but I get a good sense with some of them. I saw the photo of Adel Jaber, something was not right, he's an evil Jinn. If I could just talk to him once he would know that I know who he is and I couldn't hide it from him. If only I could go to a speech of his in America but I doubt there will be one open to the public. It would take tremendous courage to talk to him, stupidity too; he could have me arrested on terrorist claims so I won't talk to him ever.

"Blessed that I am not his other man" because there are those who question Jesus and end out mocking him by accident. They are mocking someone who died for them, no one would do that in their lives you don't mock soldiers do you? Many people laugh at his actions not knowing why he did it, that is an error on their part. I don't mock soldiers here who die, I may hate a lot of them but I don't cheer for their deaths I just hope they lose. If I were in battle with them then I might. I just think many of them are stubborn and can't be told otherwise so I don't like them, I don't wish death on them I just wish they quit. I only wish death on killers like Chris Kyle, I will tell you if you were affected by him so it calms you down and you know that you are right but I will never tell you if I think you would hurt someone like him because as we know that is bad for you. I can wish death on Chris because that is the punishment for killing someone but I would never post it on the internet in part because others get mad from it.

There are so many Jewish books; people could not distinguish between what was required from God and what people who weren't Prophets did. That's why they chose elders; they thought the Elders knew best. Jesus came to the Second Temple to say "I'm the Messiah, I have all of the answers", he performed miracles to prove it. God even knew that some would not convert because they aren't completely sold on him and they over thought the Torah that's why people kept questioning Jesus, they had no clue at all why he would have people work on the Sabbath in order to feed others.

We have free will, God gives you answers, you can chose not to be righteous.

A transgressor is someone who does bad deeds because you are fighting God whether intentional or not. God does not tolerate usury. But then Islam says as long as your good deeds outweigh the bad so maybe it is forgivable even when you stole from an orphan but who does that? Don't worry about corruption, that will be forgiven we are not perfect.

The girl who was rude in the airport is not a hypocrite, she is just rude and it will just mean that her friends won't like her, there's no reason to dislike her, there's just no reason to like her enough to even be around her. If I had to deal with her and she was rude, I will expect her to stop and call her out for it and she won't get too mad so she is actually fair she will even make a case for herself that is a good sign on her behalf. She's not going out of her way to be rude or is feeling good about it, it is just her saying "not today, I don't want it, move", strange to think. I still think her attitude is bad for her and she either doesn't know or just accepts it. But entitlement is different, if she purposely walks on people than she knows she is wrong, I don't think she is that, she is just rude which isn't really an insult. Her parents didn't raise her wrong, they just haven't shown her that she's better off not being rude and she doesn't get it she can probably go her whole life that way as long as her kids don't become entitled, then she needed to learn a lesson. Mike by definition is a thief and a hypocrite, he would beat me up if I stole money from him and he would expect me to pay him instantly if I owed him money. We all have tolerance levels, it is never hypocrisy if someone expects you to be home no later than 12PM if they abide by that same rule. The rude feminist that I yelled at is a hypocrite and she doesn't even know it. She wouldn't like to be treated the way she does others who don't agree with her. If she had said yes to me asking if she liked being made an ass out of, I would respond with "ok I will mock you when you make a mistake with respect to you, I will do your definition of being friendly to you." Learn from her mistakes.

No wonder why I thought there wasn't enough hours in the day, I spend so many hours researching this material.

You have to abide by whatever rules you set, if the rules are not working than they must change through dialogue. Whereas you mom wanted to humiliate you because she doesn't know any better, she expected you to be her slave which you are not, she even set her own rules that is so illegal the phrase "my house my rules" implies that you are not smart enough to make your own together, she even wrote her own rules how embarrassing they think I am stupid. It is impossible to live with her, she knows it. With teenagers this is different, you want to protect them and you want them to know whose authority they are under. If they can stay out all night, get good grades, and be respectful then they are ready for it after all you want them to have unlimited freedom, they just need to be accountable and if they mess up, then it has to adjust, we want for them to learn. If they call and wake you up at three in the morning, then they aren't ready for it, they can only make so many mistakes with this I can then show that they are taking advantage of this opportunity and that they must adjust somehow since they are at fault. If I can teach them "I don't like your friend Ally", then they have to listen I sure will listen to what they have to say because I want to get it right.

They stole the Black Stone; they would not let you pray to it and we have no photos before 1880 so we will never know for sure. The last thing they want is for historians to analyze it.

The clock is ticking; they now wait on you so plan your debate. You are on the offensive. This is but a castle waiting to be brought to its knees, we raise soldiers to further the truth, and they fear us. We can prevent an invasion in Lebanon. You can raise armies with this material, people will be on your side, they will believe you, you can become a leader!

I hate two faced people where they act one way around some. Why do you have to talk to me funny, just say "get out of my store" it would make things so much simpler. Do you even notice that you are impossible to like? I don't feel welcome at all.

Vengeance is how you define it, a lesson may be necessary for someone who doesn't get it insulting them back is fine remember other people have to deal with them. If the other person treats you bad, do the same to them if they say stop then stop, then you can say "oh you told me so" sarcastically.

What makes these people so sick is that their military does it; their citizens don't get any of the blame when they promote killing innocents and stealing land. How many people in the West know that they are trying to conquer the Middle East? You can never hide something like that on purpose. We aren't allowed to blame their citizens because some idiot will yell back "they didn't do it!" But this same jackass will talk about Islam and how he views it as a threat to the world. I now hold up a sign saying "most Zionist citizens are responsible, they cheer when murder happens." I've seen a few of their Facebook posts I would know.

Who would be a better parent, mom or Muhammad? That's a rhetorical question; I know who of the two would trust me. I would love to teach this to a kid who was abused.

These people would not declare war on countries if it did not help their image. There would be no reason for them to.

The Taliban with respect is not Islamic. God would not make it so women could not be identified in public, they can rob a bank if they wanted. The same goes for those women who only show their eyes. There is a perfect amount of face to show now and I can prove it now. I just ended Anarchism with this as well. You now cannot be an Anarchist unless if you want to promote bank robberies, I'll pass.

I know people want to call it propaganda when the Syrian government shows photos of Bashar and his wife with other citizens smiling but it is also to inform you that things are going ok. It is to give people hope in Syria; there is nothing wrong with that. There are not lying to their citizens, they believe in where Syria is going. With regards to Ali, I find it excessive how many tweets he sends out a day, we don't need to hear his advice on everything and most of them are repeats I would respond with "got it" if I were neutral on Iran. I don't read all of his tweets that would mean I was him if I sat there and agreed with them. You can tell that I don't like twitter; it doesn't make sense with this constant reminder of who you are even if it is for those who care enough to listen. I would only want statements from leaders and updates, you the common user on twitter can debate with people somewhere especially when you keep writing "Trump wants to keep us safe from terrorist's dumb hippie." You can only tell your followers the same things so many times, at least come up with new creative attacks if this really is a war for you but even then you will run out after spending a year researching and doing it, I don't think you realize what you are doing.

You do not know the hymn so you cannot be a sorcerer but it is forbidden anyways.

Remember that countries are in a mindset, they will keep producing leaders that best reflect them even if you overthrow them. Even if you did, they will separate from each other. I will show you, I can read someone's name like Saddam's son and know that there will be another one exactly like him 70 years later so long as little changes are made in Iraq. That's how I know the allegations against Udey are false; his father would not allow it from him though some far less serious may be fact. I am telling you this because Udey is more serious than I am, I do not call people "monkeys" if I think they sucked in a match even if I knew they had dogged it. They will keep getting the same leaders in Saudi Arabia who stab their citizens in the back it doesn't matter what Islam advocates for, the country is ruined only a coup will get them out of this cycle. So if they get a coward (all of their leaders are) they will get a coward this is something that can be counted on. There will be no Princess Diana to come along and help them out. This is different in America where we had products pushed on us in generations which have altered many in America's ethics and way of thought. It requires the youth to break from this and decide what they want if they get mad that Clinton has her corruption allegations right before an election. People would not have tolerated that back in the 60's. It's up to our governments to have our best interests, its ok if they are a bit corrupt but it has to be below a certain point and the citizens must be taught the dangers of it. Morals are going to go down in America; people will take from Johnson, Clinton, and Trump. Clinton is the ultra feminist, Trump marries models and has an expensive taste, and Johnson smokes pot all day what happened to just politicians man? Isn't that Idolatry? I know these people are brought on purpose. Johnson bikes and he smokes pot, easy match. Sanders is the one who wants people to stay in college for more than four years which he will give to you for free, that makes sense. Trump is big business against illegal immigration and is right wing, even easier. Clinton is the one who wants women to claim they are being taken advantage of and she will step in to help them, easiest. It's ok to look up to them. However we are meant to draw from the Bible, you can take from Moses, Jesus you name it and apply them to the world around us, just don't say quotes from the Bible when you disagree with someone best if we go in hiding and then when they ask just say "James inspired me." I can tell people that these are my influences but only to those who get what I am saying because most can't rationalize drawing from the Bible but they wear shirts of their favorite athletes.........did I just type that not knowing why they make that mistake? If that is too difficult for them, I can just say Saddam Hussein inspired me. Following the Trump presidency, this could be so bad if he unites America, I could end out fighting Muslims here who no longer support Palestine because they trust Trump so much. I'm so convinced that everyone who despised him will get it out of their system within two weeks, they could end out liking him but say "I don't agree with these things he says but he seems to have my best interest."

Work on ignoring what another person's opinion is when they say something senseless, say "thank you for your opinion" and address something entirely different than what they have just said. Be very careful, you still have to study what they say like Derek Carr does. What people type on the screen mean little, which age you will come to accept this, you have to believe in yourself because few if any here will give you that chance.

Aisha and Abu Bakr are liars, Ali had to win the fight or else who knows what would have happened to Islam that means the war against the Persians was done by Abu to harm Islam. Ali had taken over two years after the war with Persia was over. Ali won with the odds against him; fate could have just decided Ali to win. This fight was necessary, Ali is a hero. I would have sided with Aisha, she knew Muhammad on an emotional level whereas Ali knew him on a friend level. You've got to love her confidence; she was a great woman too being a leader whether she was right or wrong in this fight means nothing. At the end of the day, she convinced others to side with her and I know this to be fact because she was a teacher, people listened to her. I will trust her soldiers IQ levels to not follow her blindly; I know they would talk amongst each other if she were right to fight in this battle. I find it even more incredible if she actually fought, I am impressed. She even made sure to teach others about Muhammad to help others better understand what is in the Quran; I would want her on my side. People love talking about Aisha in mockery man I hate it because she did so much for Islam that you don't do for your own country. Abu I mean this with respect because you will now be the target for these people when they read this- Abu suggested that his own daughter marry Muhammad. He trusted Muhammad now whether or not you think it is ok for a 6 year old to get married, spend three years studying Islam, and stay with Muhammad, well fine just leave it at that. You have no piece of evidence that she tried to run away. Now because I made a joke out of you for mocking Aisha, you have to downgrade your insult and say "oh well Muhammad just saw a good opportunity." This practice was normal for 600 AD; do you seriously think they care what you have to say about them?

Please do not condemn the people of the West. Many of them do not know what they support or it is part of their workplace, or it is because of a clique. I don't have the percent but most don't do the wrong thing on purpose, some use it to degrade others but this can be overlooked. Not a day goes by that I condemn the people of Saudi Arabia who chose to hate other Muslims who differ in faith.

Even if women cover their whole face was does it matter when their jeans are tight enough for me to focus on their asses? Sex sells, I could tell a girl who is covered up "thank you for not reveling your whole body", she will appreciate it.

When you drink beer, do you grin or do you do it to upset God? Do you purposely be drunk in public to distort the peace? No, you do it for a good time, not to betray God. This is why you are told not to be a drunkard; some need to be told that because they make a fool out of themselves in front of others who don't want to see it there are kids in public after all. You could very well walk in front of traffic.

You must surrender to these morals in the Bible; they are for your own good so you don't end out like many of these people in their 60's who take advantage of others and have horrific social skills. It will take awhile; you may have to look up "Quran morals" on the internet.

There is no such thing as an "Islamic Terrorist" I condemn it 100%. I will show them the Quran and the Hadith's to back me up. I can now prove this as fact. Islam has my back I take it personal now. There is a thing called "walk away", Muslims don't impose their will on others. More lies from American media. I don't sit here and allow these lies to prosper.

If I said "I want to save a life, no Muslims are allowed in America for safety purposes" that would make no sense. That would mean that there should be no Muslims at all in any country and that it would be wiser just to force convert or kill them all; I won't allow that to happen. They could not have a country and I've learned that many of these countries have no terrorist's attacks and have maintained peace for thousands of years that means it is 100% achievable with the right education. In fact I would be a coward to tell someone from Lebanon "no" when they are fleeing to help their family, they would do the same for me. I will never harm an innocent; I want to show people that there is an alternative to these Democrat and Republican solutions. Reader, remember too that calling people an "Islamophobe" you have to get the definition right, that person arguing with you could be "uncertain" or "infatuated too much to their own country to overlook the truth". They are only an "Islamophobe" if they intentionally try to attack you because of your religion. They could just be against Islam, please view those people as fair-minded but resentful of who you are to the point of insults. Islamophobia is too broad but did you sit down with these people and explain everything in detail to them as you were instructed too? I wager not. If you cannot be civil, then you must walk away.

The goal of a message is to inform others. If you are just informing others of their mistakes or them pushing a product on you, then what are you really doing? You are wasting your viewer's time if you do this. You should teach others how to avoid these scams, not show every individual scam or address the same argument thousands of times form different people. You gave your response; your viewers know how you feel about something. You are trying to win people over, not show why the other person is not worthy of a debate with you based on the facts you have provided. The viewers will get that sense but the thing is that if it helps your case to address how you know more about the subject then the opposition, you can say that. You may have to say "you provided no examples of why you think the BDS movement is racist, all you did was yell."

If I advertise this as "Christian who will argue that Muslims are not the enemy, I will defend them" that may pick up well. It is essential that I copyright this material, that way I can sue others or at least show that I have the original source of it.

We all started somewhere with the religion; he gave us a chance so we need to return the favor, this is the least I can give him. I get to serve God every day of my life. There is nothing higher than that.

There is no "American Dream". They bring in illegal immigrants to increase the unemployment line for more division in society. Wake up. Live your life the way you want to. Only you can turn this into a positive, you spent four years in school. Think of the Lithuanians, they thought you had no clue of what you were talking about you can show them that you are more knowledgeable of material they've spent years studying; you can impress those who matter. Stick to history, religion, leaders, improving your ethics, dialogue, debate, and economics. It is on you know to find the people who are worthy to be around you. By age 30, imagine how much you could know, imagine the conversations with others who will like you for you! It is going to work! God wants to work with you, he wants best for you and you want what is best for him this is a team effort, he trusts you more than you can ever understand, he does not doubt you one bit. He needs you to help the Palestinians out here; this is a calling not many get. Holy books make us more intelligent, they also provide us with social skills because we now pay attention to what others say, they require us to focus on the scripture from within. What you do is justified because you have good intent. That's called sound judgment that means you don't have to worry about anything at all because you do what is best for God. If you still don't see your place, remember that the message must get carried on for generations so there will be more who fight the good fight on God's behalf, God wants everyone he can get this is such a gift. You are part of this fight; it says in Islam that there will be a join Muslim-Christian ally that means you will make it to Heaven. They acknowledge you as Christian!

What people don't get is that all religions must make the case to you. This is a good thing, we have nothing to hide. We can show answering "God told us not to be hypocrites" is proof that we must do it instead of debate it and claim that it could work if everyone were "just a bit of a hypocrite." People watch YouTube videos for a narrative in favor of their religion so they can say "haha, we're right" when they don't realize you don't need these videos, you go right to the source and then ask yourself "how does this relate to me?" You have to keep doing that over and over and over again. I swear by my method for most. Everyone is different, it took take someone into their mid thirties to get it.

It also must be brought up that the TV practically tells you to move away from religion and much of the internet questions you for it. Why exactly are these people trying to push me away from something I would want to be a part of? It's not for money we know, people would donate to local charities and the money would be the same. This ends out making people believe more and more because these religions have the answers. They even say that our enemies do things in hiding that means that Christianity doesn't. If something was written in 60 AD and it turned out to be fact, I'm going to follow most if not all of what they are saying. We all have this picture of a "Christian family" not realizing that family has nothing to do with Christianity, it is what you make of it. Most could say "oh they just want to be religious or they want to impress their family" when that has nothing again to with Christianity. These religions are telling you what the future will be, the media does not they will say that the world will not end but we have nukes. Even if someone said "oh well these religions were written with good intent to help others" but wait how exactly did they build the Second Temple or advance math? Why did people keep dying to help spread the word of Jesus'? They loved their kid after all, they did something tremendous. I'm trying to get these people who disagree with us to the point where they are cornered and say "I don't know, I don't know, I don't know" but these same people say that humans were dumb when they started out. How were humans able to interact with one another? They needed a common language after all. What gave them this knowledge to build a Temple?! I find it far more believable that God taught them rather than they learned on their own and if you said aliens, wait, how did the aliens know? Did these aliens you claim existed start with these superior intellect than us even to this day? I'm going with God being responsible and here's why God keeps telling us what will happen, you are implying that aliens are seeing into the future and know where Christianity will spread which is such a reach that they know so much about humans for them to know of two world wars that you are claiming that aliens are responsible for. You would have to respond with saying aliens were responsible for two world wars because these wars got us to this point. There's no way aliens can see into the future or even control humans look at how hard it is for the Zionists to win a war, it would already be over if they knew humans, these people who fight us are still learning. God determines the Middle East, not aliens.

It is going to be difficult to fight these people in a war someday because now they know so much about Lebanon citizens because of Twitter. They are going to guess what people will do; we better have the best military leaders we can possibly get. They already have the best possible military strategies and know a lot about the landscape. No one knows for sure when a country will quit during a war but they will get a sense for us. When they steal land in Palestine, they go by bits and pieces they know what the international reaction would be during an all out war.

If someone who wasn't on board was in war with me by my side, I would tell them to at least use Jesus name as a guide to restore hope in humanity so I can give them a reason to fight because of what Jesus had done for them. I think God would like this.

Part of what we have to do is separate Hamas from people with hope because we will beat them. These are really two enemies we are facing after all. So often you will see someone ignore the Middle East as a whole not because of Islam but to say "well they will never figure it out." If we support those with a bright future, we can show them two things one that they are right for us to support them and two that we believe in them. I totally get it if someone watched Nimr Al Nimr's speech and said " forget it, what country does this" but then they don't follow up with saying to themselves "well if these people had succeeded than this would not have happened" as if this would still happen under Shiite's which is basically what this person is saying when they say "forget it." I'm telling you "no don't do that, sign a petition or something because others in Saudi Arabia will take note of the unjust treatment of Shiites." This is far easier than people think and it is also easy to spread the word you can dupe someone by saying "we are reforming Islam." I can explain this to someone in under 5 minutes, you can too, a martyr was killed. Many people here don't like Saudi Arabia, all you have to do is hold up a sign that says "don't kill protesters Saud family!" I'm certain Nimr Al Nimr's family would have been happy seeing your support. This also extends to Pakistan because they are harming Islam's image but there won't be a war there thankfully. Muhammad wouldn't just start a war with people and I can prove it. I also would not like it if a Christian country had my own people killed in a war, we don't have to go to war. I don't think these people in Pakistan see the damage they would do to people in Islamic countries, now people have to get questioned because of them, that is selfish if ever.

I don't think you see how easy this really is maybe you can talk someone into visiting, isn't that what you want? You have a flag of Saudi Arabia after all; you want to make the image as best as possible, you treat others with respect I know because you are reading my book not laughing at what I write in it. You and I both know that if we don't treat others who visit with respect than no one will want to go; I trust that you are not rude in any way even if most people in the country want nothing to do with me knowing that I'm from America, which I can overlook that. Remember, I let your people immigrate here, I may not want to make friends with them I can't say because I have never met one but if I saw them being mistreated I would stand up for them; I doubt that they are that ungrateful to not appreciate it. It's perfectly fine to me if we are so different that the majority of Saudi's cannot be my friend in real life (that can't be, I've seen interviews of citizens) but it's not ok if we can't share information and we both end up insulting each other that's where I draw the line here. I just get the sense that people want to hate each other and if you teach your kids "well 90% of them hate us" when the truth is that "90% don't agree with some of the laws here, most if not all want to be left alone" aren't you cheating your own kid? I'm just trying to help because I too don't like it when I see someone from overseas posts something on Facebook about something they disagree with in America like they are some peace activist that I should listen to when we are all different that's part of why we have borders. You know I don't agree with every law in your country, I may talk about it with others and post my disapprove of it on the internet (I let you do the same but I don't even bother to post it with material so minor) but I'm never going to say "oh this must change" or keep talking about it over and over and over again! It is good that my vote doesn't count in your country when you are 21 hours flying distance away from me, that law does not affect me in any way. The agreement is that Americans and Saudi Arabians will handle their own politics that is a good truce we can both agree on because there is something in it for us Americans, the same goes for your country. What amazes me is when people within your country will belittle us and then sends their kids off to colleges here in America, if we really were less than you, what sense would it make to send your kids to four years of school around us? How could we be capable of good education, think, wouldn't it be the worst school system in the world if what this person was telling you was true? Our teachers would be terrible and our textbooks would have nothing of value in them. If the guy responded with "oh this is the one school that is good", Americans were still capable of giving you that one school that you value over your own countries colleges. That guy would be an idiot to send his kid to America. I doubt this happens that much maybe like 5% of the time. If you thought that was one sided, I would have gone to a Saudi Arabian college if the offer were there but I know so little about it.

I wouldn't be typing this if I thought you were disrespectful to your wife by mocking her or something, give me a chance here. I don't even care if someone in Saudi Arabia said to me "look I don't think women should vote" because they believe in it, I can also overlook that and I didn't want it to be brought up in a conversation. I look out for my image, my thing is if you are adamant about something and you are educated enough to have passed we'll say high school, then I want you as my friend. Some of this stuff looks very bad for you people internationally (I'm not trying to shame you in any way or get you to care enough to change it), I'm just here to say that you aren't dumb, nor are you out to get others. I really want to visit your country.

If you like someone's parents chances are you will like their sons and daughters who are your age. Wow, took me 23 years to realize that. It doesn't apply to me because I spent so little time with members of my family.

We don't vow vengeance on others because it is bad ethics. Once the person had learned from it, you don't bring up their past. You have to teach people a lesson if they are hitting on your girlfriend of course thankfully I would just dump the whore. Maybe the whore has emotional needs and she feels they are not met by you but she didn't bother to tell you! We will never know because we don't know if she doesn't care / was raised wrong, was caught in the moment (I would absolutely forgive her), or if she really wants emotional love that's real love if she didn't tell you thinking it would hurt you. I will get a sense of it but I have to make sure that she isn't lying about it. If I ask her she might say "oh yeah it was the last choice" and start crying thinking that's what it was when it wasn't. It is also important because it could be the last choice but she didn't want the relationship to go anywhere, she just wanted to show you off. I would not want to call a girl a whore and make her believe it because she did what she thought was best for our relationship. I can show her the good in the world. I will hold her hand and say "you are not a whore" only if she really wants it she has to appreciate and not call me out for doing a courageous act.

At the end of the day, we still feed, clothe, and house 93% of the world's population that is fantastic given the number of people on this earth. You can even take out 3% because they choose to do it. Now we just have to improve illiteracy rates for those in Africa to show that we love them. I don't want to over think this thinking that someone argues with where charity should go on the internet with me because that person would not be rational.

Some very evil people will try to ruin my life, I can avoid them or I can now stand up for myself. Life will be better if I follow these guidelines, I just know it, and this material will make me serious. It can't be an accident that four days after I think about how it is slander to portray Muhammad as someone who seeks out kids to marry, I find Christianity.

Muhammad allowed tribes to operate under their own laws if they were People of the Book. Many people thought Muhammad was messing with them and was trying to overtake the country. I would never allow Islamic people to go by their own court systems I would even laugh at them! I would say you live here, you get our judges.

Tell Saudi Arabia you want a Christian court system, see what they say, they have to say yes. Muhammad would say "no I don't own Arabia, nobody does" but Assad is still allowed to declare war on these people because the majority support him. So while you can live in a tribe in Syria, you have to follow their laws and not attack his troops or leave the country because Syria is for all. Muhammad would not let you form your own country knowing that you would betray these tribes even if it were at a much later date! This allows Assad to attack them because he knows that their school systems will teach to hate Syrians and to attack the West.

It shows you how unnecessary the Jizyah is in today's world. We don't have tribes; we are already protected by our own countries. We don't form states within a state; we all operate using dollars, federal courts, and federal schools. All of our businesses follow US law, it's not like they can sell you a new videogame, have the disk scratched and say "oh well, sucks to be you."

It shows you how good Muhammad really is because many Christian tribes would probably say "well you are a good guy but you are way over your head, I'm not paying your tax for protection and I'm not your ally. You don't know what you are doing." Many Jews didn't trust him because if Muhammad is the one who speaks for Arabia, that could mean he's trying to attack other Jewish tribes and you have already heard of him declaring war on Jews. I don't blame them one bit because Muhammad could unite Arabia and say "haha got them, my Muslim soldiers strike the Jews now!" I know there are instances where people just surrendered to him, they may have thought they would die later on and said "we did our best, we might be able to get him back" to their tribes. Though we now know he would never do that. I just know both Muslims and Jews will not tell you this, the Muslims don't want Jews to seem reasonable when the Muslims don't get that they must be confused about the term People of the Book thinking that it means that Jews and Christians should convert and are the problem when we are not. I know there were tribes that betrayed Muhammad, but we can show that there were good Jews at the time to show how the enemy is not reasonable but if we explain that to someone on the street they won't get it.

Muhammad didn't want to kill people ever. At worse people would be sold into slavery. That's more proof he didn't pick favorites but Wikipedia will gladly tell you about how many were executed to scare Christians. When people read it, they could interpret that Muhammad (or rather Muslims) wants war if they do not lead the country when it is the opposite. I can just picture someone at Wikipedia saying "how long do you have, please take a seat, I will answer any questions you want" knowing that you have no clue about Islam. The stuff they post on their own website is a giant contradiction to the narrative being fed, if he treated women and others great, why would it reverse course after seeing Gabriel? The people who knew Muhammad best would have ditched him and said "we don't like you any more" it's not like he got idiots to follow him.

The internet has a whole website dedicated to insulting Islam called Wiki Islam; I noticed it was fraudulent when their sources about the Jizyah do not come from the Quran or the Hadith's. Remember the Wikipedia will tell you all about Jihad and how Muslims view all wars as religious to make people think that Muslims want Jihad when they don't! After all, you could read into the Byzantine Empire being destroyed and say "why was there 200 years worth of war? Do Muslims want to kill all Christians?" I remember reading "we will get them back" from Muhammad, I know what that means, that means he will take your whole empire from you. If you are a Christian and you really don't trust Muhammad, please get that the war with the Byzantines was a strike back for someone unjustly dying. Do I think it needed to be 200 years of war? Well I'm not Muhammad, but he is a serious guy. Just think if Iran intentionally targeted your child and said "no we won't hand the person over responsible for your child dying", how would you react? I can't even put into words the leader that Muhammad is because I know now he didn't do it to spread Islam but some unfortunately took it that way and thought it meant "take all of Europe, India, the rest of the world till they surrender." In fact during the middle Ages, Christians and Muslims got along great, there was no need for war. With regards to the Ottomans going to war with neighbors, first off they made an alliance with Germany and second every empire did that at the time except Russia. War was only when it was beneficial at that time, they had laws about only targeting soldiers until they surrendered, and that's what we all hope for in wars we want wars to end. All I'm trying to say is that if you really do support the "good guy", Muhammad is the good guy I have the proof!

Stop saying "God commanded me to do this." God gave me a brain, I will do what I think is best. God is simply trying to help guide you in the real world; I have free will after all. God is not looking to argue with you. If you want to go to a local Mosque to be friendly, go right ahead. The reward in the real world is greater because now you've made new friends and showed how God wins, that is a good use of your free time. If you want to do something else, go right ahead. Also, Satan does not play a big role in our lives, if you doubt yourself that is normal. It could be one time (or zero) time in your whole life and you were wrong to blame him for doubting yourself in a debate. Also there is instinct where you know to avoid a girl who is trouble. It's not like you are fighting him, you can improve on your doubts on your own. Islam is also not an "upgrade"; it's a different choice if you prefer not going to Churches. You were born a Christian that means People of the Book, there is no "upgrade." I would hope you would never say to a Christian "here I will get you to Islam", most don't want to go just be quiet to Christians about Islam. Muhammad never said to us Christians "I'm here to upgrade you", the point of the debates was to show that he would debate and that he would sit down with someone and make his case which had helped followers of Islam understand that he believes in Islam. Converting to Islam is a choice that many don't want to make and that is fine. I'm just young with this material that's all.

Here's the thing, I was slapped across my face if I lied to my parents so naturally I will not lie to you that applies to Muhammad. Although I have read so far into Islam and believe most everything in the Quran (keep reading this paragraph), I will never believe Muhammad is a Prophet. It was said to me at a young age that "Jesus is the Son of God; he is the Son of Man, my Lord and Savior" I will repeat that to you. If Muhammad met with me in person, I am convinced now I would say to him and this is with great respect- "Muhammad I love you and the good you have done for us Christians but you're 100% mistaken if you really think that you're a Prophet. You are a great Christian philosopher that I take so much from." That's why the father has to be a Muslim; the kids will follow the father's guidance, it's not by accident that they allow a Jewish wife. It's about getting the next generation onboard. I still have to defend what I will now refer to as "very cool Christianity with calligraphy", but I will always believe that Christianity is the way. Anyone who helps Christians, I'm going to help that is an instinct. I'm against Daesh so much because you can't evict Christians ever. I could end out referring to Muslims as Christians who follow Jewish law. If they said "no we are Islamic" I would say "yeah dummy you do surrender yourself to God (notice I didn't refer to God as Allah), you are still a Christian you just follow Muhammad's teachings." I know I would walk out of a Mosque and say "this isn't what I want and guys you are doing prayer wrong." My final words, I will address both Jesus and God, I may not even mention Muhammad. To me he is just a moral teacher that I agree so much with such as no more Prophets (but after the Messiah so I would not count Muhammad). I said once "I follow in your steps Muhammad" because to me he will always be a great teacher to learn from. Finally, when I say Jesus would protect me, I mean that Jesus is my Messiah, I don't even mention God because I studied Jesus, God was just mentioned a few times. It was always said to me that Jesus is the path to salvation. If you can picture me as kid choosing between God and Jesus I would run to I would run to Jesus. It's the same thing if Jesus were on earth with Muhammad, I would still follow Jesus said word for word no matter what, Muslims would follow Muhammad. I was not really taught God, I only know Jesus as my Lord. I will defend it; I will say "no Jesus is my Lord." I view myself as his Apostle because I take on the role. I want to teach this to someone because if a guy or girl was beaten and wanted it to stop, they could say "Allah help me", I would say "Jesus help me, oh God." I was also never taught the Trinity so by default I don't believe it. Just understand that I follow Jesus so much that there is no room for another Prophet, I wasn't taught Prophets but I learned about Adam and Eve, Noah, Abraham, David, Moses, and most importantly Jesus. So when I read the Quran, I will take (again 97% of it as knowledge) but I will call Ibrahim-Abraham. The names are too similar that is a bad example I could call Abraham-Ibrahim. I call Yahya- John the Baptist, and I would literally say "you mean John the Baptist?" I would think that is slang or his nickname and say "my homeboy Yahya." It makes no sense to try to correct someone. I was taught to pray to God but I think of Jesus because he is my protector, I know that much. I even said "no, no one comes after Jesus", I confessed it! That must be why in Islam it teaches you to "say Allah is one." It's no wonder why I relate more with Shiite's; they remind me more of Christians because they get persecuted! With Sunni's I don't relate much if at all, they are more of an ally. That's why on Western media they will keep telling you Islam is so different from the West; they want you to believe that their way of life needs to be fixed and I'm saying it doesn't.

To me this is so surreal because I believe Muhammad is a Prophet but the only way to get me to believe he is if he came before Jesus and that goes against history. Jesus had saved all of humanity, I will believe that Muhammad completed the books but only if he was before Jesus, I will even think of him as an Apostle! The only physical way to get me to believe Muhammad as a Prophet (I was never taught the term) is if you lied and said that he came before Jesus this is huge, you can tell me that this completes the book but I will for the third time say 97% is true so you can't tell me that he completes the book just that he has the "most correct of the three books." Actually, you can say that he completes the book but I would have to add in what I hold on to which is a direct contradiction. I know (or think was never taught one Bible) that there are different versions. That's why I believe he is a Prophet of God, because of the story of him on the mountain it just sounds right to me. I know Moses was given the power of God so I'm going to believe Muhammad naturally because he won so many wars and so many people follow Islam and I knew Jews hated Christians they killed Jesus after all. I won't get it, I will just say "ok" casually, it's either he was before Jesus or he's not a Prophet in my eyes but since he is such a leader I viewed him as a Prophet. Had I have been taught that no Prophets came after Jesus; I would never view him as a Prophet. I love Muhammad but because my heart says otherwise I will always say "no one after Jesus." so I can view the Quran and learn from much of it. Don't think of it as a mistake or a fault or something to be confused about, many Muslims do not take from the New Testament, it goes both ways many Muslims will tell you Jesus did not rise from the dead or cleansing of the temple did not happen and will never believe it, so we all have stories we don't pick up. No one has the Scrolls of Abraham and no one on this earth now knows what stories from the New Testament carry over for Islam. It shows you how pointless it is to convert from Christianity to Islam because in Islam, you have Sunni-Shia, then you have different branches of Sunni. When Muhammad said, "Don't speak of a Trinity, stop this is for your own good." he must have meant that people would be divided more, someone might speak of a Trinity to get more converts from Christianity. God absolutely knows that people would not leave Christianity because not one of us can explain God and there are plenty of people who hold tight to Christianity. If the religions are the same, they are, then why are people converting at all? There are differences in all three on how to practice faith. Some people want a Pope, some people want a Caliphate, and some people want Kingdoms. We should only make the case to people who are not People of the Book; it makes no sense to argue at all, we are meant to enjoy each other's presence or at least get along with one another but separated by borders. I'm going to start believing in predestination because it is not something to get upset about that I believe Muhammad. I think we are just meant to be separate, it is impossible to unify us because you would have to get rid of one group. This is all for the same movement but different Sunni Shia Protestant-Catholic Orthodox etc., we all care for one another.

You cannot buy people. You can't promote Christianity in a country, they are God's people, what they want is subservient to America and not Jesus. They know they cannot get people to believe that the Messiah has not come yet given the numbers. What they will promote in the future is the belief in anything and "unity".

The Zoroastrians were engaged in many wars, Abu Bakr who came after Muhammad had attacked them to achieve peace. If the Sasanian Empire wanted to conquer even the smallest piece of Arabian owned land and Abu Bakr saw this coming, I justify this war completely because it's a matter of the better leader. You don't condemn Islam when your neighbor was willing to attack you at any time even if it is a slight conflict, that's common sense. Islam would be doing the right thing for ending war, that would make Islam a religion of peace by definition. I would have to prove that the Sasanian Empire wanted to conquer more land and I'm very confident they did because they had the largest empire before Alexander took it over, it must have changed policy for good when he won it. Again I don't pass judgment for starting wars, Zoroastrians are peaceful people and I would have no issue being under their leadership. I think I might have gotten it because when Muhammad said in two separate letters to leaders "you bear the sins of the Arians....Magi", he meant that the empire leaders were responsible for wars. He did not condemn the leaders of Egypt and Bahrain or tell them to convert in any way. He even addressed Egypt by saying "if you decline, then bear witness that we have submitted our will to God." I read this as "in the event your empire does cease, than there was nothing you could have done to prevent it." It would explain why the Muslims won in Persia, it wasn't even close. They had also fought the Byzantines for over 200 years because of a killed diplomat; Muhammad said "we will get them back". Muhammad was a smart man, he would answer questions in a thoughtful manner and he would debate Christians on why they should accept the Quran, we do that in the real world today by talking about religion.

The ”Christian” group home leader lady thought I was a troll and so did all of staff. Staff and I would talk behind other workers backs and I would hear some of the drama between each staff. There is a huge issue with this, this “christian” lady was not called a troll once despite wishing an eternal hell on everyone she ever met and then would get mad at you if she thought you insulted someone for their beliefs such as making fun of a freemason which I did next to her, and she yelled. I was told by all the staff how amazing of a woman she was maybe because she was the leader and they all wanted a promotion, but besides of that, she could do no wrong, not one staff ever said one thing bad about her and one staff who had many issues with all of the other staff seemed to be “genuine” that this “Christian” lady was a good person and it probably was you as to why you would ever have problems with her. This staff even sat down……….so what is a troll to these people? I wonder this. I am not saying I never “trolled”, but this doesn’t define trolling to them? This is a great person for society who doesn’t want to be friends with any patient or worker ever but will spend all day talking about her beliefs when she gets that chance? What goes even further, one of the workers was gay and this “Christian” lady made it so clear to me that she believed all gay people burned in hell for eternity granted I had to ask which I was crafty about. She didn’t care one bit that an 18-year-old autistic patient who lived there insulted the staff at times and worst of all, the 18 year old autistic patient tried to have sex with her where he would talk to her for hours a day (haha!). For someone who acts like they know the Bible the best of all of mankind, I will show you how she wants to believe this one here, she believes you can be in a gay marriage your whole life and still go to Heaven because she wants her image to look the most tolerant of all. It’s a prime example we she clearly supports gay marriage yet gets all of these Christians to denounce gay marriage on the internet with her, and then she will argue for it because it makes her look better as a person alone to say, “well I support them and their decision, I can’t find the bible verse that I reference all day, but your problem, not mine, you don’t get it and your homophobes”. I never asked her directly, but I know this from her oh yes. All she would ever say is to me, I want to be with “jesus” in heaven, “jesus did everything for me and I love him more than anything of the earth”. One of the staff at the next group home who is not mentally ill and has worked for Riverside for 5 years with a college degree in psychology, he told me to “move on” after shielding everything she does as if I need to work with him, this guy finally quit after trying to get me to see some sort of good in her, figures. She acts as if there is a Bible verse with her name in it that Jesus himself promised her the Heavens, I have yet to find a verse like this. Knowing this Christian lady, she was not telling the gay worker to her face, but she would tell another worker since the staff did discuss the Bible amongst each other a decent amount. Granted the gay worker knew I do not like openly gay people at all, but she clearly wanted to work with me in some way enjoying giving me help when I needed it at times when she was available provided she had wanted to talk, this worker graduated the same college as me in psychology, she was by no means “dumb”, none of the staff at any group home was “dumb” except for maybe one. It makes me wonder what the staff would say to each other if ever a serious problem emerged, yet I don’t know really the result, but I am sure they are all ready to come with horrific names to call each other yet you can hear them laughing and joking when they are in the office on Wednesday’s having their hour-long group meeting. All of this baffles me. Isn’t it also funny that the group home leader has played the system so well to allow any religious beliefs but being that she is the leader of the group home and she can easily make a phone call to a higher up to kick you out which she can do, she will never “tolerate” someone’s religious beliefs being mocked including her own so if you make fun of the Bible, she will write you up every time. This horrible woman obviously must have asked or looked up Riverside policy if she can do this at Riverside and be protected by them under all circumstances to know something like this that endless human rights complaints against her will do nothing and all the staff is to work under her so the dumbest thing to possible do is to try to get her fired since they will always believe her and not you. I wonder if she knows people do not like other people’s religious beliefs where she purposely tries to except everyone else’s, but I doubt this because a patient brought in a satanic pentagram that he bought that was shaped like a pizza as “art”, she didn’t even make a face at it, I doubt she is fighting the obvious feeling any religious feeling a religious person would get. Yet she is always right on religion because she told me she “saw jesus” but gave no such description of him and told me she was promised Heaven for eternity where she will never go to Hell ever. She is the leader the world needed but never elected yet does nothing at all with her life after work, has no social media at all, no friends, visits one church for an hour a week as her “service”. So, she is the leader at this horribly ran group home where it is always your fault when something goes wrong, she is the religious leader at the house, yet everywhere else she takes a backseat or is hidden from the public. It gets even worse, she clearly picks in her mind who goes to Hell which may be everyone, but her mother and father given that she has no friends at all yet will give you a Bible verse about how most (meaning 99.99999999%) are doomed eternally. If this can get worse which it will, she told me she used to be an alcoholic as a teen but gave it up for her “Christianity” later, yet she became Christian at 23 and stopped being an alcoholic when she was probably 19 (sounds like a lie to me, the one who claims to see Christ himself). She told me that everything she does is to please “god” as if to sound genuine to help her “lord” yet makes a face catching herself that I have seen, that is clearly a lie that she only wants to go to Heaven like she talks about all day long. She also said she went on Christian dating websites to try to get married. This is what I believe, her mother (or grandmother who would share this? I don’t remember here) told her that she is in a fight with all of humanity, you must hide it, and you are the one who is the most special person this world has seen provided she stays by her mother which her mother bought a Quran she told me just to read to better learn the faith which I am guessing by this her mother is a very smart person, her mother may not be.